Chief Executive Officer of Housecall Providers

Current CEO of Housecall Providers, Rebecca Ramsay, MPH, has devoted three decades of service to the field of public health as both a practitioner and as a leader focusing on population health, innovative care model design, partnership and collaboration, and transformative initiatives to bring quality health care to individuals and communities. She earned a nursing degree from University of Wisconsin-Madison and a Master of Public Health from Portland State University. Rebecca's career has focused on addressing the social determinants of health often faced by at-risk and underserved populations. She has designed and led the implementation of multiple innovative population health programs that have improved the lives of traditionally marginalized community members, several of which have gained national attention.

Under Rebecca's leadership, Housecall Providers has expanded the breadth of services to include a community-based palliative care program serving residents of 7 counties in Oregon. With the development of a palliative care program, Housecall Providers now offers a comprehensive continuum of care for homebound and seriously ill patients which spans home-based primary care, palliative care, and hospice. Rebecca has also prioritized growth of the primary care and hospice programs during her tenure, expanding access to home-based primary care by opening in two additional counties within Oregon and by doubling the hospice census over the past several years.

As CEO, Rebecca has emphasized creating a more diverse and inclusive organization, in part, by strengthening partnerships with other service-based community agencies to build a more robust support network for the homebound and seriously ill members of their community. In 2024, Housecall Providers earned an Oregonian Top Workplaces award, scoring well above statewide employee satisfaction benchmarks, with 97% of Housecall Providers' employees reporting that their job makes them feel part of something meaningful and 96% reporting that the organization operates by strong values. These results affirm that Rebecca and her leadership team have successfully created a workplace culture and environment that prioritizes their employees' most critical needs and encourages and inspires them to make a meaningful impact in patients' lives and within their community.

In her free time, Rebecca expresses her creativity by constantly recreating her ornamental garden. She also enjoys cooking delicious food to share with family and friends and traveling the world with her husband of 25 years and their two adult sons. She holds two board positions, one on the American Academy of Home Care Medicine's C6 Board of Directors and one on the Project Access NOW Board of Directors.
