

ALEX KIRILOV

alliantgroup Director

Alexander Kirillov is Technical Director for alliantgroup's Mid-Atlantic headquarters in Washington D.C. He specializes in incentives for the software & technology, government contracting and architecture & engineering industries. His current focus is on educating business owners on the Employee Retention Credit and helping them claim this credit. In his role as director

Alex has worked with over 700 U.S. businesses to help them identify valuable government incentives. To date, he has helped these businesses claim over $500 million in credits and incentives. Alex is responsible for, among other things, leading a team of over 100 engineers, architects and project managers that help businesses claim the Energy-Efficient Commercial Building Deduction, or 179D. His team has helped hundreds of clients secure this deduction. Alex maintains client relationships and oversees the proprietary energy modeling software (epFace) that accurately captures the energy-efficient improvements made to buildings. Prior to joining alliantgroup in 2014, Alex was Director of Sales and Marketing at Teco Diagnostics in Anaheim, California. While there, he monitored all sales-related activity for the entire department. He also facilitated company growth by creating new sales avenues for the company. Throughout his career and now as alliantgroup's Director, he has been passionate about strengthening American businesses and promoting energy-efficient design. Due to his leadership, alliantgroup's 179D has become the premier provider of energy-efficient design tax services.
